Getting Started
Hello, Teachers!
Let's get the conversation started on the Covalent Learning Forum!
First, if you'd like, introduce yourself!
Next, share a topic that you'd like to learn more about! This will give us an idea of how we can best suit your needs. If you have a specific question, submit it to the appropriate subject area "Channel," and someone will get back to you!

Welcome to the Covalent Learning Forum!
Here are a few guidelines for getting the most out of this resource!
1) Using the forum:
Teachers: Ask concept questions, clarify something you've read, inquire about exciting research developments in a field of interest, and so on!
Scientists: Share research progress, propose teaching materials, promote programs for high school students or teachers, and so on!
2) Etiquette
Username: Please choose an appropriate username by which you can be easily identified.
Timing: We know questions can come up at the last minute, but please allow for enough time for a response that is satisfactory and timely. Please indicate your timeline in your post.
Clarity: In order to provide you with the correct answer, the first time, please state your request clearly.
Respect: Please be respectful of the differences in background amongst Forum participants!
